PATRIOTISM OF PAST

WILMOT PARCHER TELLS OF THE PERVENT LOYALTY OF THE DAYS OF LINCOLN

At this time of political activity with candidates for office from President down, we three-score-year-and-ten men are prone to look back to the time of Lincoln when we were young and consider the activities and conditions of politics of that day compared with the present.

Surely at that time they had great mental questions to solve as well as they have at present. With their slow method of transmitting news at that time by stage-coach, steamboat, etc., compared with the fast express, telegraph and telephone of today, the concentration of facts and conditions could not be so easily intensified as today. Yet, excitement ran high and every heart was filled with loyalty and patriotism for his country, born of an earnestness that could only have been brought about by their fidelity and love for their country and their true Americanism.

Possibly Lincoln did not have as many complex questions to face as the two candidates of today have.

But, our national sovereignty was at stake—the Union was about to be dissolved. The hydra head of slavery was the juggernaut which he, and the people of the north, had to face. And history tells with what fortitude, strength of character and wisdom he faced it.

As a boy, well do I remember in the year 1858 the tremendous political excitement growing out of the agitation of the slavery question and whether the states of Kansas and Nebraska should be admitted to the Union as free or slave states. 'Twas on that issue that the great debates of Lincoln and Douglass took place. How eagerly we watched for Horace Greeley's New York Weekly Tribune (we had no dailies at that time), and scanned its pages for a synopsis of their debates and other happenings of the day. And it was full of Lincoln, Seward, Chase, Trumbull, Cameron and others, all strong men but of different political faith.

How eagerly we followed his series of political debates with Douglass, and his other utterances, and then his famous, logical Cooper Union speech in 1860 at New York which made him the most conspicuous figure in American politics at that time. And after his nomination at Chicago for the Presidency that same year, all combining to make one of the most momentous events in the history of the United States.

How full of spirit, animation and patriotism was every hamlet and log schoolhouse in what was then the territory of Minnesota, where I lived, at their public political gatherings.

Nothing could stem the tide of that kind of patriotism and true Americanism. Oh, that we had more of the same kind today!

As we heard the different discussions of the day by men and at the mention of Lincoln's name, how our youthful bosoms swelled with pride and admiration, and how ready we were to enter into a fist combat with the other boy who spoke disparagingly of him.

I believe it was that kind of sentiment and patriotism—both in the north and south—that led up to the great conflict, and I also believe it was only that kind of conflict that could have saved our country and made it into an indissoluble union.

Do we have that kind of patriotism today with all our wishy-washy sentimentality, idealism, theorism and Johnsonism? I fear not. And so much the worse for our country, say I.

How we love to think of the career of that time-honored statesman and great man—Lincoln. Though his career was fraught with sorrow and heartbreaks for his country and his people.

How page after page could we fill eulogistic of his greatness, goodness, sagacity, generosity and love to his fellow man. But every reader of history knows of all this.

The years since Lincoln's death have served only to raise the general estimate of his service to the country and of the high moral quality which his character exemplified.

—WILMOT PARCHER.

LADIES' NIGHT — BIRD AND FLOWER CLUB—PLEA FOR CALIFORNIA DRY

LADIES' NIGHT

The Federated Brotherhoods of Glendale will have a big banquet tomorrow night, October 3, at the Masonic hall. For the first time in the history of the body the plates at the banquet will be open to the ladies as well as to the men. Hereafter it is planned to make ladies' night an annual feature.

The brotherhoods are especially fortunate in having two speakers of international reputation, Dr. D. M. Bandier and Miss Marie C. Brehm. Dr. Bandier is one of the strongest orators in the American temperance field and at present is head of the great California Dry federation. Miss Brehm of Chicago has twice represented the American government at the International Alcohol Congress in Europe. She has made a personal study in the countries themselves of Italian, German, French and Portuguese vineyards. She has been a popular lecturer in England, Ireland and Scotland. Those who have heard Miss Brehm bear witness to her wonderful wit and magnetism in whatever subject she covers.

The banquet begins at 6:30. Do not miss this great get together opportunity. Dr. I. H. Durfee of 508 Brand Boulevard, president of the Federated Brotherhoods, is head of the arrangements committee. Also T. D. Ogg, 149 South Kenwood has tickets for sale, 35 cents each.

BIRD AND FLOWER CLUB

Sixteen young people and five adults had the time of their lives, so some one said, on Saturday evening, when the members of the Bird and Flower club assembled at the home of Mrs. Nanno Woods, 1222 Milford street promptly at 7 o'clock. On the last Saturday of each month, instead of taking an outing trip the club spends a social evening at the home of their leader; in fact, it might be called a monthly party. Hundreds of sea shells attracted great interest, laid out on the dining room table—night caps, cup and saucers, chitons, abalones, olives, and many other kinds. Under a magnifying glass even the tiniest were found to be exquisitely beautiful in design and color. Seaweeds too, floating in water, demonstrated the wonders of the deep. Then games were played, and oh, what fun everybody had, good natured, kindly fun. The clock struck 9 all too soon, but Mrs. Woods had declared that at 9 the party must stop, so with regret wraps were donned and goodbyes were said. One friend with an automobile very kindly loaded up twelve children and brought them safely home; the rest were cared for by their parents.

A PLEA FOR CALIFORNIA DRY

"California, wet or dry? Shall we give the dries a try? Beer or beefsteak, bread or gin, shall we steeped in booze and sin, advertise this peerless state as a land of drunken hate? Shall we say to all the earth grogshops are of royal worth? Shall we put saloons above lads and lassies and the love of good women and let rule party men and church and school? Or shall we, as voters, say, beware, you have had your day—you have brought disease and crime into every age and clime; prison, pen and pauper place are the signs of your disgrace; ruined homes and lives are found everywhere you abound! You've lived long upon a bluff, we as voters, cry enough! Through the ballot box you die—California shall be dry."

"This should be the people's cry, 'California must be dry!' Will the drunkard's wife regret if this wondrous state goes wet? Will the drunkard's children cry, should this commonwealth go dry? Slavery with its greed and pall held this nation in its thrall till two million boys in blue gave the colored race its due, and a Lincoln's mighty hand swept this evil from the land. Sometime, in the days to be, California shall be free—free from grogshops that disgrace and enslave the human race, making men lose sense and sight through perverted appetite. May the people rise and stand for a sane and safer land. May this be their battle cry, 'California must be dry.'—A plea for California dry by Howard Carleton Tripp.

Mrs. Perce Curtiss of Oak street, left by auto for Taft, Sunday, taking the Ridge route. She will be in the oil country for a brief time. Mr. Curtis will follow her later.

MILK FAMINE THREATENED IN NEW YORK

SERIOUS CONDITIONS IN METROPOLIS ON ACCOUNT OF MEAGER SUPPLY OF NECESSARY ARTICLE

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—New York is threatened with a milk famine. The milk supply is said to be only one-half of the normal quantity. The price has been advanced and the poorer classes are suffering specially from these conditions. It is believed that a great deal of milk has been sent out of the country and is still being sent out in the shape of canned milk, for the use of the European armies. It is likely that the city will institute some kind of an inquiry into the causes that have brought about present conditions.

BRITISH TWO MILES FROM BAPAUME

GEN. HAIG'S TROOPS CAPTURE LARGE SECTION OF GERMAN TRENCHES NEAR KEY POSITION

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Gen. Haig's troops are now within two miles of Bapaume, the key city which is being defended so strenuously by the Germans. The British have thrown their forces across the Bapaume highway and are gradually closing in on the strong Teuton position. In this movement they are being greatly aided by the famous "tanks," the armored, caterpillar autos which they are using to sweep the trenches clear of their defendants. The new machine throws an enfilading fire into the trenches while the troops charge them.

FRENCH ADVANCE TOWARD PERONNE CITY

GEN. FOCH SENDS HIS TROOPS FORWARD IN SUCCESSFUL EXTENSION OF "SQUEEZE" AGAINST TEUTONS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Gen. Foch is now striking successfully at Sailly on his way to the capture of Peronne, the famous city, which the Germans are so anxious to retain. There have been numerous isolated engagements as the French line has been advanced bit by bit. North of Bouchavesness the French army has advanced about a mile and has captured a large number of prisoners. North of Rancourt and southeast of Morval the French and Germans are conducting a continuous struggle.

BRITISH SHOOT DOWN ANOTHER ZEPPELIN

CAPTAIN OF DESTROYED AIRSHIP FOUND STILL ALIVE— THIRTEEN OTHER BODIES RECOVERED.

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—One of the German airships that crossed the East coast last night was shot down, toward the northern outskirts of this city. The Zeppelin fell, a blazing wreck, into an open field. As the vessel descended the bodies of the crew were thrown out and scattered over a considerable area. Thirteen bodies have been recovered thus far. The captain of the Zeppelin was found terribly burned and injured but still alive.

HITS SEVERE BLOW AT ROUMANIANS

GERMAN VICTORY AT HERMANNSTADT IS FOLLOWED BY RALLY OF THE DEFEATED TROOPS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—Falkenhayn's victory over the Roumanian first army has somewhat disconcerted the leaders of the Roumanian armies. The blow was severe and the Roumanian troops trapped in the Red Pass were badly cut up. However, it appears that a large portion of the first army has managed to join the Second army. The scattered first army has reformed on the second army's lines and at three points the Germans have been thrust back. Falkenhayn is engineering measures to counteract this revival of the Roumanian strength and continue his initial success.

CARRANZA SHAKES UP HIS OFFICERS

JUAREZ, Oct. 2.—That the Villistas did score a success at Chihuahua, when they attacked when the people were celebrating the national holiday, is now practically acknowledged by Carranza, who is enraged at the whole affair. He has ordered a general shake-up in the official staff at Chihuahua. It is rumored that Trevino may be removed. The Villistas are jubilant at their great success in raiding the city and getting the ammunition they needed so much. They are also boasting over their exploit in defeating the garrison at Cusiuhirachic.

GREEK DECISION EXPECTED TODAY

ROME, Oct. 2.—Advices from Athens state that King Constantine is still hesitating. Von Falkenhayn's victory in Roumania gave a halt to the proceedings for Greek support of the Allies. The king fears to declare for what may yet prove to be the wrong side. Meanwhile revolution and rioting are common throughout the kingdom. The Greek legation here reports that since it has been stated that Greece would join the Allies there have been wholesale massacres of Greeks throughout Asia Minor by the Turks.

RECORD OF THE PAST

R. D. GOSS HAS NEW YORK HERALD PRINTED ON DAY OF LINCOLN'S DEATH

R. D. Goss, 708 West Fifth street, brought an interesting copy of the past into the Glendale Evening News office last week. This is a copy of the New York Herald of Saturday, April 15, 1865, containing the news of the death of Lincoln. The little four-page paper, with its six columns of small type, is a great contrast to its vigorous and powerful successor, the modern New York Herald.

The columns of the paper containing the announcement of the assassination of the great president are bordered in black and the leading column on the front page is headed "Important." Below this is another head "Assassination of President Lincoln." The head goes on to state that Secretary Seward was "daggered in his bed but not mortally wounded." It also states that "J. Wilkes Booth, the actor, was the alleged assassin of the president."

Under all the seeming commonplace of small type and weak handwriting, can be read the strong emotion that was thrilling the nation. The scene in the theater; the wretched bravado of the assassin, as he sprang on the stage, shouting "Sic semper tyrannis;" the escape of Booth from the theater, his springing on a horse that was in waiting for him; the excitement of the audience; the scene at the deathbed—all are real and the more effective because they are given simply and without any attempt at "writing them up."

One can realize in looking at the brief sentences that the heart of the nation was profoundly moved. In fact the rising feeling of indignation had not yet had time to overflow its bounds and the feeling exhibited in the days that succeeded the fatal event are not evident in these strictly restrained columns. The single editorial that appears in the issue is remarkable for the fact that it makes no comment on the act; but confines itself to making a concise statement of the facts. It refrains from naming Booth as the assassin.

There are other items of interest in this issue of the Herald. Considerable space is given to a proclamation of Jeff Davis, whose "voice is still for war." Davis was evidently laboring under the idea that he still had the support of Lee's army. He declares that "Virginia shall be held and defended," and that "he will never abandon to the enemy one foot of soil of any state of the confederacy," but that if compelled to withdraw temporarily, he "will return again and again till the baffled and exhausted enemy will abandon in despair his endless and impossible task of making slaves of a people resolved to be free."

That fighting was still going on sporadically is manifest from the different items recording encounters between federal cavalry and confederate troops. Selma, Alabama, captured by General Wilson's cavalry and the bombardment of Mobile. General Thomas with the fourth corps and 35,000 cavalry was expected soon in front of Mobile.

There is a calm confidence in the columns of the old paper that shows that the thinking men of the nation realized that a new era had begun, and that the building up of the nation was imperative. The London Times correspondent telegraphs his paper that the north can only hold the south by putting a garrison in every town and that Lee's surrender was merely the prelude to a second and greater revolution.

All this aftermath of the war was on the eve of being cleaned up. Lincoln's assassination came at a most untimely moment and threw back the generous plans that the leading men of the country had for dealing with the south. There are indications in this old sheet that the tone and temper of the north was exceedingly generous.

In the midst of all these solemn and significant details is wedged a story of an "Ice Monopoly." The ice dealers had decided to double their charges having formed a combine with that intention. A portentous announcement the developments of which are to be seen in the present day." In every way this old paper is of profound interest.

NEW JERSEY PICNIC POSTPONED

The New Jersey picnic, which was slated to be held Saturday, Sept. 30, has been postponed until Saturday, October 7. The picnic will take place in Sycamore grove as formerly announced.

"ON TRIAL FOR LIFE"

ELDER SHAW OF CANADA PREACHES IN ADVENTIST CHURCH

Elder H. S. Shaw, of Calgary, Canada, formerly president of the Western Canadian Union Conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, has just arrived in Glendale, to take work in the Pacific Union Conference. He left Calgary six weeks ago, visiting Salt Lake City, Oakland, Mountain View, Cal., Lodi, Cal., Turlock, Modesto and San Jose on his way south. Elder Shaw spoke in the Glendale Seventh Day Adventist church, at Third and Isabel streets last night, his subject being, "Our Advocate." Meetings are being held at the church at 7:45 every Sunday night, and are open to the public. Elder Shaw said in part:

"Whether you are a Seventh Day Adventist, a Methodist, a Baptist, a Congregationalist or an infidel—whomsoever you are, you are on trial for your life. 'We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ,' is the inspired word to us. We all are on trial in the greatest court that ever convened. There 10,000 times 10,000 of heavenly intelligencies minister before the great tribunal. There Christ pleads the case of every one who has committed his case to him.

"When your case is called you will not know it. An angel has written, day by day, all the acts and words and thoughts of your life. That record is brought out as your name is called. Christ, the witness as well as the lawyer, is there. He presents the case. Not one of us can plead we are not guilty. 'All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God.' But for those who have accepted it, Christ has paid the penalty.

"Don't imagine God ever rejoices over a lost soul. He weeps as justice demands that the man who has not confessed to Christ his sins, and sent them on beforehand to judgment, must meet eternal death. God forbid that any of us ever should reach that condition. It is a possibility. Some names will be blotted from the book of life. 'Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment, and some men they follow after.' It is our duty, by prayer and confession, to send our sins to judgment, surrendering ourselves wholly into Christ's keeping.

"A certain British subject living in Cuba in 1867 was naturalized as an American citizen. The Spanish government afterward condemned him to be shot. The British and American consuls protested, but their overtures were unheeded. Just as the firing squad raised their rifles to fire the British consul rushed up and spread the union jack over the man. The American consul then spread 'old glory' over that. 'Fire if you dare,' they said. The man's life was saved. When Christ hears our cries for mercy, he comes to our aid and if we are citizens of His country, spreads over us His banner of love."

RAIN BEATS RECORDS

H. E. Bartlett, Glendale's authority on rainfall and weather, says that the present rainfall beats all records for this time of the year. Mr. Bartlett has kept the rainfall records since 1909 and during that time there has been no rainfall equal to this at this season. In September, 1909 there was a rainstorm that piled up a record of 1.08 inches. That was exceeded by the rainfall of Saturday, which gives September this year a figure of 1.15. Sunday's rainfall amounted to 1.24 inches and the rainfall today up to 11 o'clock was 1.65. This gives a record for the storm up to that hour of 4.06 inches.

INVITATION TO CLUB LADIES

Mrs. Danford, librarian of the public library, is anxious that the club ladies of Glendale should know that the librarian and her assistants are ready to aid them in their work throughout the season now opened. Special attention will be paid to the Literary wants of the club women. Information regarding books useful for the preparation of papers will be given freely and every effort made to place the resources of the library at the services of those preparing papers.

It is also worth noting that the library has added several valuable books to its music section.

The library board will hold its regular meeting at the library Thursday.

EVADERS OF CONSCRIPTION

It will be remembered that in the civil war in the United States the government had to deal with many difficulties caused by attempts to evade military duty under the conscription system. Ultimately most of the abuses were remedied. In similar fashion there are difficulties that have cropped up in connection with the conscription system in England. These have also been overcome and still there are men who manage to evade the conscription. These men are called in England "super-slackers." The old "slacker" merely delayed enlisting while as yet enlistment was voluntary; but the super-slacker is evading military duty when conscription is in force.

This might not interest Americans were it not for the fact that Americans in England at present are experiencing considerable difficulty from this source. At times they are mistaken for those evaders of conscription and forcibly detained with an eye to their being sent to the front. English officials are rather opaque of vision at times when it comes to dealing with the United States or other countries. The British bureaucrat and his myrmidons are as obtuse in many matters now as they were in the days of Mason and Slidell.

In their enforcement of this conscription law the officers of the bureau have laid their hands on Americans, some of whom have had a difficult time in getting rid of their grasp. Americans have been caught in every haul of the official net, and they usually remain guests of the London police until the records are looked up in Ambassador Page's office.

London is girdled by several circles of underground railways. The inner circle has a circumference of eleven miles; the next circle has a circumference of forty miles. The trains are run every few minutes and the military net is drawn closely round each set of passengers as they come out on the platforms. Scarce a day elapses without an American or two being held up by the conscription officers.

Careful examination of all registration cards held by aliens is going forward. Everyone is required to show why he is not serving in the British army. Aliens are required to prove that they are neutral. An American who was summoned to join His Majesty's army, replied that he was a citizen of the United States. He was asked to prove it. The American mailed his passport. Unfortunately his passport got lost in the mail. The American was summoned to answer before a certain date. If he did not do so a couple of soldiers would appear and take him along as a super-slacker. The American called the officer on the telephone and reminded him that he had sent on his passport and asked if that were not proof enough. "It makes no difference what has happened to your passport," replied the officer. "You may be an American but you'll have to prove it." The American proved it by having the American embassy write a letter to the recruiting officer. The officer immediately hastened to make an ample apology.

On the whole, however, Americans have a pretty easy time in England. They are popular and the attitude of the United States in connection with the munitions question would have sufficed to make them popular had they not been so any way. There are a great many Americans in London. Just now they literally swarm there as the big munitions factories have many agents and every American manufacturer has an agent on the ground looking for orders. The Americans are well satisfied with the treatment they get in London; but they ask to be protected from the attentions of the recruiting officer.

NATIONAL FARM LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

It may interest a number of people in Glendale to be told that a national farm loan association may be organized in any community where ten citizens owning land desire to borrow an aggregate of not less than $20,000. The land must be unincumbered or the proceeds of the loan must be used in part to remove any lien. Loans may be as small as $100 or as large as $10,000. Those desiring the loans must first make application, in writing, for a charter to the Federal land bank of the district in which the association desires to do business.

When the whole affair has been organized and each borrower has subscribed for stock to the amount of 5 per cent of his own loan and no more the bank sends its agent to examine the representations made in the application, and if found satisfactory the charter is granted. The organization is then a body corporate. It can take in new members and have succession indefinitely. New members must be borrowers.

After the charter has been granted the applicants no longer act in their individual capacity. They are shareholders in the organization and as such they have a separate existence created by law. These associations are organized for the primary purpose of giving each borrower the benefit of the combined credit of all its members to the extent of the capital contributed and the limited liability each incurs. Hence the associations are required to indorse any loan made to members. The association decides whether or not any loan shall be made by refusing the application for every loan that is in any way doubtful or unsafe. No loan can be made unless it is approved by the loan committee after examination of the land offered by way of security.

National farm loan associations are not limited as to the number of their members. After one has been organized it may serve an entire neighborhood by receiving new members. Each association may obtain loans for its members twenty times the amount of the stock in the Federal land bank, no matter how large its holdings of stock may become by the growth of the association.

When this system has been perfected it will be a great stimulus to farming all over the United States. Already associations are in process of formation and it is hoped that the land banks will be established without delay.

extreme type. He is a member not only of the socialist body, but also of the Authors' League of America. This society has a membership of 1300 and includes practically all the famous men and women of the American literary world. There are many extreme socialists among the 1300. Just now influence has been brought to bear upon some of them with the result that they are advocating a union with the American Federation of Labor. Jack London heads the opponents of this movement. He says that it is "inappropriate, disadvantageous and dangerous." The matter will be settled by a referendum vote and the "antis" will probably withdraw from the association if beaten as they seem likely to be. It seems singular that Jack London should oppose a measure that carries out many of his own ideals. By joining the Federation authors could be afforded help to obtain control of copyrights, now almost universally controlled by the publishers. They could also get standardization of contracts. The antis are all well-to-do; but so are some of the advocates of joining the Federation of Labor. If the antis have London, the affiliators have George Barr McCutcheon.

CONDITIONS IN LOS ANGELES

Judging from the reports we residents of suburban cities read of conditions of municipal affairs in Los Angeles we are led to believe that the city is not entirely an angel city after all. There is scarcely a day passes but something is brought to light that would show that there is crooked dealing on the part of someone or at any rate the accusations would so make the reader believe. There has been occasionally some talk about a greater Los Angeles city, meaning by that that the suburban cities should be annexed to Los Angeles, but if we who live outside of Los Angeles are good judges of conditions of affairs we are extremely proud of the right not to be within the limits of a city that has so much contention, backbiting and strife among office holders.

In the past years men have been elected to high positions in that city, who at the time of their election were given the name of being of high moral standing, but soon after their election one report followed another as to the shortcomings of these men until it became necessary for them to seek a place of hiding and have the offices filled by others whom we hope will stand the test of what at times seems to be an extremely hard to please class of citizens.

LIFE AND DEATH

O. H. JONES ASSERTS THAT THE SIN OF IGNORANCE IS AT THE ROOT OF DISEASE

There are two subjects of momentous importance that are ever before us, the subject of life; and the subject of death,—the absence of life. We see the manifestations of life on every hand; but we do not know what life is. We are taught that there is a natural life, and that there is a spiritual life. The natural, or physical life, is the vital principle which animates man, and every other living thing on the earth.

The natural life is the life we live here; the spiritual life is the life which succeeds this life at death, after the death of the natural body. We do not know anything about the spiritual life, therefore we are not competent to give an idea of it.

The subject of the spiritual life is a religious question and will be entirely eliminated from this discussion, so that no one's religious opinions will be infringed upon, as the matter with which we are dealing relates wholly to the physical life of man, and the one which I wish emphatically to emphasize. For the reason that we do not seem to grasp the fact of the great importance that is attached, by the Creator, to the physical life as represented in him.

This comes largely from the fact that, in the first place, we do not know man. We do not understand man's true place in Nature. We do not understand and recognize the relationship which exists between man, the Creator, and the other works of creation. We do not understand the laws which govern the life forces that control man's existence on earth; and connect him with Nature, and also with the Creator.

In the second place, we are liable to get a wrong conception of life. For the reason that, we do not understand life. We do not know the laws of life. And we do not know or consider the value of life.

The word man is used as a generic term, and includes the whole human family, men, women and children.

The subject that is of most importance to us now, is the wonderful fact that the world's Creator, who is also Man's Creator, considered Man and the physical life of such great importance that He left the spirit world and came to this earth as Man, for the purpose of elevating man, increasing the value of life, and bringing man into harmony with himself.

He came unto his own; and He came as a man among men, and for man's good.

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

He came as a minister and a teacher. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.

He set the world two great examples. The first shows how to live the perfect human life and come into harmony with the divine, which has already been discussed.

In the second example, we have two lessons which are the very foundation stones of Christianity. They are the lessons of service and teaching. The two objects to which He devoted his whole life work, and finally life itself, in the service of humanity. And this further illustrates and magnifies the value which He placed upon man and human life.

He went about doing good to physically sick and diseased humanity. He devoted His whole life to the recreation of the physical life of humanity.

He healed every sickness and disease, cleansed the lepers, gave sight to the blind, fed the hungry, comforted the afflicted, and renewed the lives which had gone out.

"He taught them as one that had authority." He taught them by precept and example how to live, and the value of human life. "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." He taught them their duty to himself, and their duty to their fellowmen.

And He commissioned His disciples to go and make disciples of all nations: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." "And what I say unto you, I say to all."

Here is what He commanded them to do. "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give."

That little band or company of men to whom this commission was given went everywhere, making disciples, organizing churches, teaching the people, healing the sick and diseased, and giving freely of what they had received, in the name of, and as the ambassadors of Him who sent them out.

That little company of men has now increased to many, many millions of professed disciples, with elaborate church organizations throughout the world. They profess to be successors of those original disciples, and claim to be still executing that original commission.

Are they doing it? Let us look the ground over and see.

Are we, His professional followers and members of the church militant, following in His footsteps with regard to the first example and living the perfect physical life? If we are I do not believe that any one has yet caught us at it.

Are we following the second example of teaching and service? If not, why not? I will let you answer that problem.

I think we are too willing to shift responsibility, and get rid of effort. Oh, yes, we are willing that those examples should be lived up to, both in letter and spirit; and that every duty imposed by a strict compliance with them should be strictly performed; and we are willing to have laws enacted to force compliance on the other fellow; but we prefer that someone else should perform the duties.

Everybody knows of the existing conditions in the physical world. They know of its pains, its sickness and diseases; its sufferings and its deaths; but they do not realize their enormity.

In previous articles I have given the annual death rate of babies and older children in the United States; the number of defective school children, the defectives among men; the number that die annually from chronic diseases and so forth, and it is not necessary for me to re-state them now.

In an article recently contributed to the London Medical Times, under the head of "The Therapeutics of Cancer," Dr. Robert Bell makes the startling assertion that "at the present time twenty-five millions of the world's population are destined to die of cancer."

I have statistics showing that the annual birthrate for the world is about fifty-five millions; and that of this number fifteen millions of babies die under one year of age every year.

These figures are too appalling; we cannot comprehend them. Let us look at them from another view point. Fifteen millions a year would be 1,250,000 each month, or 41,667 every twenty-four hours.

Just think of the amount of pain and suffering the sickness and disease of nearly 42,000 infants causes daily in the world. Not only to the children themselves, but to the nearly 84,000 heart-broken parents. Then add to that all the other pains and suffering, the sickness and premature deaths, caused by disease; and you have a pretty good idea of the physical condition of the world today. Such are the appalling facts which stare us in the face.

But figures are not impressive. We do not understand or comprehend them. They do not mean much to us. Therefore I am going to illustrate what these figures are intended to show by using an object lesson that is of daily occurrence. I am going to give you a panoramic view of a world scene after the moving picture style. And I want to have you give it close attention. And as the churches have been favored with a special mission which is closely related to this subject, I desire that they should have front seats, where they can witness a solemn, impressive, awe-inspiring scene.

Come, tread lightly, speak softly, for you are in a house of mourning, and the chamber of death beholding a world tragedy. Stop—Look—Listen! Look, and you will behold two great processions passing along before you, side by side. The one nearest to you consists of white vehicles trimmed with white plumes, and drawn by white horses. In each of these caskets is an occupant. These occupants are the young buds—your babies—which the grim, silent reaper has gathered from the beautiful flowers of earth. They did not have time to open.

Forty-one thousand, six hundred and sixty-seven of these equipages passed here yesterday; 41,667 more are passing today, and 41,667 will pass tomorrow. The next day, and the next day and so on, and on. Night and day. Night and day, this ceaseless stream is passing on.

Listen! That weeping and sobbing you hear in the house of mourning is the heart sobs of 83,334 broken hearted parents. These are Rachels weeping for their children.

Eighty-three thousand, three hundred and thirty-four passed here yesterday. Eighty-three thousand, three hundred and thirty-four will pass today. Eighty-three thousand, three hundred and thirty-four will pass tomorrow, and so on.

The other great procession is also on its way to join that innumerable throng on its silent march to that bourne from whence no traveler ever returns. It is a mixed multitude that no man can easily number. It is made up of white vehicles with the white plumes and white horses, and black vehicles which are trimmed with black plumes, and drawn by black horses. The occupants of the carriages have been gathered by the grim reaper from the same fields as the others; but they are the advanced buds and the full bloom. Here we see the child, the youth, the middle-aged, and the gray haired. This procession like the first is forever going on. Yesterday, today, tomorrow, and on, and on. Night and day, night and day, the tramp of the horses hoofs can be heard on the pavement.

You will notice that there are none in either of these two immense companies that were not slain by disease. These all had a right to live. Life was just as precious to them as it is to us.

These are no fanciful pictures, they are of everyday occurrence.

What is the cause of this frightful destruction of human life—do you ask? Disease is the direct cause and ignorance the underlying cause. What is the cause of disease? A transgression of the laws of nature, or

What Is Your Health Worth?

Is your heart strong? Are your lungs sound? Your stomach—your liver—your kidneys—your bowels—do all these function properly? Is your appetite good? Do you count the minutes to dinner time? Do you find your sleep refreshing? Do you feel springy and buoyant—or tired and depressed? Is your work a pleasure—or a task? Are your nerves steady—or are you shaky, fidgety, irritable? Are your muscles strong and vibrant—or weak and flabby? Is your skin firm and elastic—or soggy and plastic? In short—

How do you "stack up" in your physical inventory? How do you size up to the measure of a man? Are you making your physical endowment yield its pennymost return? Is your health an asset or a liability? And—what is it worth in your scale of values?

These are questions that are of vital concern to you—and to those dependent on you. They are questions that cannot be answered by shirking or smirking. You must front them in the knowledge that they affect your very existence. You must realize that only by returning to normal can you get the most out of life.

If you fall short of this appraisal—if, for any reason, you are not up to your physical par—the least you can do is to meet Nature half way.

A course of drugless treatment at this institution will rid your system of the body poisons that produce debility and disease—will energize and stimulate you—and will point the way to a fuller, brighter and more efficient life.

We're waiting for your answer—what is your health worth?

THE WORLD'S LARGEST SHIP'S REGISTER CHISELED IN ROCK

Doubtless "Lloyd's" is larger in the sense that it contains a longer list of names, but on the score of sheer size there is nothing else in the world to compare with the great "Ship's Register" of the port of Muscat.

Muscat is the capital of the Sultanate of the same name which occupies the southeastern corner of the Arabian Peninsula, and from its position at the mouth of the Persian Gulf it has become a port of call for all vessels serving the Turkish and Persian coasts, as well as one of the stations for the British navy. In the early seventies the Yankee skipper of an East India-Boston clipper, which had been driven into Muscat by a storm, whiled away the day or two that his crew was busied with repairs by painting the name of his ship, the "Mary Wade," on the black basaltic rock of the hillside above the bay.

The striking effect of the large white letters against the dark background induced other skippers to follow suit, and it is said that very point now unknown, looking in vain visited Muscat in the last three decades have failed to "leave their cards" on the hillside. The most imposing records are those left by the British men-of-war, the jacks of which have vied with each other in trying to make the name of their ship the most conspicuous. The names of the "Redbreast" and "Odin" are fifteen to twenty feet high, and painted on carefully chiseled and smoothed stretches of rock. To an American the most interesting name is that of the "Isla de Luzon," painted in 1898 before that Spanish gunboat was captured by Dewey.

BIG LAKE PROJECT

The proposition to reclaim 262,000 acres of the Tulare lake basin and construct a reservoir and canals to hold the lake waters for irrigation purposes, at a cost of $6,000,000, is being presented to land owners, and after a few more signatures are secured the plan will be presented to the state reclamation commission, according to a statement made by A. G. Wishon, general manager of the San Joaquin Light & Power company, when he returned from the lake to Fresno last week. At present 175,000 acres of the lake bed is under water, and the damage this season is $2,000,000. The cost of the reclamation project is estimated at $20 per acre of land benefited, but more than this amount will be added to the value of the land. It is planned to confine the lake to a reservoir covering 20,000 acres, to lead the water into the reservoir from the various rivers and streams flowing into the lake and to provide canals to provide canals to carry off the surplus water.

the laws of life and health, by eating and drinking. Is sickness, disease, or premature death necessary or justifiable? No. Are they preventable? Yes.

Who is responsible for the sickness, disease, and death of the small children and the youth? Their parents are responsible for the health and life of their children just so long as the children are under their care. And society is responsible for the care, education and guidance of the parents, and all other members of the society.

Now I want to have you give strict attention to what I am going to say; and let it sink down deep into your inner consciousness; but not so deep that you will forget where it is.

We have arrived at a time and place, where we know that the primary cause of all sickness and disease, is eating and drinking. If you have a pain, a sickness, or a disease in your system, you have taken it in at your mouth. Do you get that?

Remember that, all pain, sickness, disease of every kind and nature, as well as premature deaths, are primarily and directly caused either by poisons which you take directly into the system through the mouth, or by those poisons which you generate in your system from what you take in at your mouth.

Destroy, murder, kill, slay and suicide are harsh terms as we define them; but we have to select the name to fit the deed, for ignorance does not change the name of the act. Ignorance is no longer justifiable in this enlightened day and age. For this curse of disease which is scourging the earth, and sweeping off so many of its children and youth, year after year, is not entitled to soft names; although it is chargeable directly to the people themselves.

The Creator creates life; but He never destroys it. The Creator creates life and gives it to men; but men destroy that life by one means or another. They destroy their own life in various ways. The lives of their children are destroyed while in their trust; and they destroy the lives of each other in various ways. Life is destroyed in every case, and the name of the act does not change the fact.

As long as man himself is the cause of all the misery and suffering—including the destruction of the lives to which I have been referring—which exists on the earth, he alone is responsible regardless of the name. Somewhere and at some time, he will have to render an account of his stewardship.

If you are a believer in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man; if you are a member of some christian church, and a believer in the teachings of the Bible—you are responsible. You are responsible whether you are a believer or not, if you do not help to right the wrongs which curse the earth. The greatest curse the earth has ever had or ever will have, is this curse of disease which is destroying so many young human lives. The sin of ignorance and willful stupidity which is at the root of the whole matter is the worst sin men will ever have to answer for. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

GASOLINE FROM NATURAL GAS

Statistics just completed under the supervision of J. D. Northrop, of the United States Geological Survey, department of the interior, show that the year 1915 was one of decided improvement for the casing head gasoline industry. The quantity of raw gasoline extracted from natural gas and sold in that year amounted to 65,364,665 gallons, a gain of 22,712,033 gallons, or 53 per cent. over the quantity marketed in 1914. The average price received for the unblended product at the sources of production was 7.9 cents a gallon, and the market value of the entire output was $5,150,823, a gain of 0.6 cent in average unit price and of $2,044,914, or 66 per cent., in total market value, compared with 1914.

The volume of natural gas utilized in the manufacture of this quantity of gasoline, exclusive of that recovered as drips from gas mains, is estimated at more than 24,000,000,000 cubic feet, and the average recovery of gasoline per thousand feet was 2.57 gallons.

SPRING AND AUTUMN

The glades were late no blossom showed
Hills that were bare, are decked with flowers;
But, in the tangle of the woods
I scarce can reach the songster's bowers.

Matted and thick with twining growths
Out of my reach the sweet buds blow,
While in the Autumn, undeterred
I thread the copse, where red sprays glow.

Thrusting the duller browns aside

"Not in a car," said Bobby. "Only at home."
